II. Assessment Task Description/ Directions

For this assessment, you are required to investigate, document, and analyze programming and practice for a community family service agency of your choosing. Successful completion of this assessment requires that you develop in-depth knowledge of agency practices and reflect on them in the context of all you have learned about indicators of mental and emotional well-being of families, the development of relationships with families, and building resilience and family competence.

Your assessment has two parts. In Part One, you will develop a profile of the family service agency you have chosen. In Part Two, you will analyze agency practices based on your knowledge of the effectiveness of programs, processes, and intervention approaches in supporting the well-being, competence, and resilience of families that are being served. In Part Three, you will suggest changes to the program based on your analysis. In Part Four, you will create a professional development plan based on what you learned about the program including a professional philosophy with an overview of values, attitudes, beliefs, and behavior that would be congruent with the underlying philosophy of the program you studied.

Part One: Family Service Agency Profile

Part One of this assessment requires that you develop a profile of the family service agency you have selected. Please gather information about this agency and its programs through both printed/ published information and interview(s) directly with key employees of the agency. In conducting interview(s) with key employees of the selected agency, first develop a plan for engaging the employee(s) in this conversation. Your plan should include how you will contact the employees, gain permission to interview, your conversation starters, questions you pose, and how you will record information from the conversation, etc. Provide a rationale for conversation/ questioning strategy and actual choice of interview questions. Use the profile content below as a guide. Have the full plan approved by your course instructor before beginning.

In the creation of your profile, although you may provide additional information, be sure to include the following:

- A description of the program that you are evaluating, including:
  - Mission and vision statements
  - Programmatic structure
  - Populations served
  - Legal and policy frameworks to which the program is required to adhere
  - Monitoring procedures followed by the program, including those related to sanitation and health care monitoring
  - Methods the program utilizes to maintain and organize legal and ethical documentation of service delivery, including methods for promoting dignity and upholding appropriate privacy practices
  - Evidence of how and where the program utilizes a strength-based, family-centered lens in policy and practice
  - Written standards, policies, and program requirements

- An overview of specific strategies employed by the program including:

- How the program works to support family engagement, including specific curricular approaches designed to support engagement
- How the program supports the physical and emotional well-being of participants served
- Strategies used by the program to promote family competence and resilience, especially those strategies that are relational in nature
- How the program evaluates service delivery, including support for family resilience and well-being within typical, everyday environments
- How the program collaborates with other organizations and families to address structural inequalities;
- How constituents served -- including family members -- are supported in engaging in leadership and policy development within and outside the program; and,
- How the program provides resources to families in the following areas: health and wellness, social and emotional development, and mental health, paying close consideration to how the program addresses risk, protective and promotional relationship factors that families in the larger community that the program serves may be experiencing and how this may impact families access to their resources
- Specific strategies used by the program to support families by addressing family, neighborhood and community risk factors, and promoting resilience
- How the program collaborates with other organizations and families to address structural inequalities
- How constituents served -- including family members -- are supported in engaging in leadership and policy development within and outside the program
- How the program provides resources to families in the following areas: health and wellness, social and emotional development, and mental health

Part Two: Agency Practice Analysis

In Part Two of this assessment, you will analyze agency practices based on information gained from your interview(s) and development of the agency profile. Be sure to include the following information in your analysis:

- Developmental processes utilized by the program to ensure support for family autonomy, diversity, mental and emotional well-being, strengths, resilience, competence, and effective response to transitions
- An assessment of the program's effectiveness, especially related to service coordination plans, activities in emphasizing family strengths within the context of neighborhood and community, and methods used for data collection and measurement of outcomes
- A description of the ways that the program incorporates information on policy and advocacy into program practice
- An assessment of the technology used by the program to share resources, communicate internally and with external audiences, coordinate services, and monitor service delivery in relation to program standards and goals

Part Three: Agency Modification

In Part Three of this assessment, you will be suggesting modifications to program practices based on information learned through your Part 2: Agency Practice Analysis. - Practices and policies supporting family resilience and well-being
- Culturally- and linguistically-responsive family service plans that are family- and child-focused
- Opportunities for additional curricula focused on health and wellness, social and emotional development, and mental health, including home visits and parent group sessions, evidence-based practice, family service goals, and the utilization of family strengths to address family needs, concerns, priorities, and goals
- Opportunities to support family engagement and collaboration
- Additional technologies supportive of communication and collaboration
- Opportunities for collaboration among other community services
- Opportunities for the development of program practices and conditions supportive of personal safety, health, and mental health, and suggestions of ways in which to strengthen them

Part Four: Professional Development Plan

In Part Four of this assessment, you will create a professional development plan as if you are an employee of the agency you previously selected. After completing the family service agency profile and analyzing the agency's practice, you will have an idea of what is necessary to work in the agency and the areas in which you may want to grow professionally in order to best meet the needs of an agency staff position. Your professional development plan will have two sections. First, you will think about the strengths and assets that you would contribute to the agency's work. Next, you will consider areas in which additional growth would help you in your imagined role within this agency and create five goals that will help you grow as a professional.

- Your Strengths:
  - What are your current strengths in demonstrating behavior consistent with a professional role?
  - What ethical and culturally responsive communication and collaboration skills do you exhibit in your professional role with families, colleagues, and members of the service team?
  - How do you currently demonstrate behavior that is congruent with this program's philosophy, beliefs, and values?
  - How do you currently demonstrate respect for each families' preferred language and mode of communication?
  - How do you currently demonstrate collaboration in planning, creating policy, and providing services to families?
  - How do you currently use a strengths-based approach when working with families?

- Your Five Professional Goals:
    - Based on all parts of this assignment, identify five goals for improving your professional practice. Include at least one goal related to increasing your skills in cultural responsiveness.
