Who can determine if I am Director qualified?

Only an IDCFS Licensing Representative can determine if you are Director qualified.

What can Gateways to Opportunity tell me about my Director qualification status?

A Gateways Professional Development Advisor (PDA) and/or a Gateways Credential Counselor can only provide information regarding your current status for the Illinois Director Credential (IDC), if you have applied, or offer assistance locating the three required points in Gateways Credential approved administrative coursework/training.

Do I need to have an Illinois Director Credential to be IDCFS Director qualified?

No. Attainment of the Illinois Director Credential is one option that can be used to help meet a portion of the requirements to be Director qualified.

If I decide that I want to obtain “3 points of credential approved training in administration, leadership, or management,” how would I go about that?

1. You can submit copies of certificates of completion from trainings you have already completed for review.
2. You can contact a Gateways PDA or Credential Counselor to receive information about what trainings you may take in order to meet this requirement. Once the trainings are complete, you will need to submit copies of the certificates of completion, along with your request for training approval, as noted above.

Requests for course/training approval for the Director qualification requirement should be sent to credentials@ilgateways.com.

What kinds of training can help me meet the “3 points of credential approved training in administration, leadership, or management?”

In order for a training to be considered for credential approval, it must be at least 7.5 consecutive contact hours in length, cover just one content area, and contain an assessment component. In order to earn the required points in credential approved training, all 45 clock hours of training must cover administrative content.
